

A WORD FROM THE REGIONARY

L'homme propose, Dieu dispose....

This issue should have reached you some time ago. In spite of the effort made by Pat to assemble all the material in English, and helping all the way she could, I couldn't, because of health problems, have the translations from other language ready on time, and finish the layout.

Letter from the editor

Thanks to +Maurice for his unfailing generosity in thinking of ways for us to communicate, and to all of you who have contributed to and are reading this newsletter. We are of course still a “young” movement and this is a “young” newsletter (though not a young editor!). We would like as much as possible to meet your needs for communication without burdening you with too many requests for information. To that point, I would like to ask for your input about how often you would like to see the newsletter written and what information is of the most value.

My sense is that we all like to hear from the busiest among us, +Maurice, especially about his interactions with congregations that many of us have no other contact with. Yet that serves to incD-se his workload, which does not serve us overall perhaps.

For the rest of us, perhaps a quarterly request for news from individual congregations may be too often for smaller congregations, though useful for larger groups that have major events and gatherings to publicize. Pl-se let us distant from us. We affirm the ever-living presence and deny anything but the unity. We pray in the knowledge of unity, knowing that without that One, proper

The Revs. Chris and Liz Parker have written in with their pertinent comments.

The road to Paradise is often strewn with obstacles that hold you up and in our case it was roadworks! However the warm welcome more than made up for it and it was good to be with like minded people who want to worship God and do His Service. Aidan's talk on icons was a suitable reminder of the hidden life in all things.

The the living room were rather under utilized as we were on the go most of the time. Perhaps we need to build in space on these weekends so we can also relax together.

We would like to thank you Charles for making your lovely home available to us. It was good to be at the blessing of the birTJtul icon on the altar.

devotion and the lightness of the angels. At the first performance in July a part of the music was still presented as improvisations, but today the work has been finished, so that it now appears in a refined edition. At a new priest ordination in November the piece once again was a part of the celebration on the place of the sermon, and aroused great enthusiasm among the participants.

In agreement with Magle the Liberal Catholic Church has received the right to use the piece, so that it can be played with no royalty in connection with services, lectures ~~within the framework~~ of the church. By
